v1

A preacher man became a hero. All the world was taken by his popularity
And all his friends were letting him know he could really make it big if he'd get on TV
Or into politics, he could be president. They knew he could win
But he shook his head, at everything they said
His reply to them

Chorus

You see there's no higher calling.
No greater work that I could ever choose
No there's no higher calling
Than to do the work that God gave me to do
No higher calling

v2

A pretty girl became a housewife. She chose to stay at home and raise her children well
Her folks were shocked that she would give up her life. She had such talent, everyone could tell
Why she could be a star, they knew she'd go far if she'd only try
But she shook her head at everything they said
This was her reply

Chorus

You see there's no higher calling.
No greater work that I could ever choose
No there's no higher calling
Than to do the work that God gave me to do
No higher calling

Bridge

Now you might be a movie star, you might get on TV
Yeah you might go really far, and that's alright you see
Because it doesn't matter who you are or if you're big or small
No the only thing that matters-are you following His call

Chorus

You see there's no higher calling.
No greater work that I could ever choose
No there's no higher calling
Than to do the work that God gave me to do
No higher calling
No higher calling
