

Sunrise, Sunset©

Writer: Robert E Jones
R E Jones Publishing/ASCAP

v1

Thanksgiving in the fall and winter cheer
It's crowded in the mall, Christmas is near Brother carves the roast for the first time in his life
The woman takes her husband by the hand
As they watch their boy become a man
And their daughter's fiance drives up to their lives

Chorus

She said, "I don't remember growing older, when did they?
The seasons of our lives have slipped away, but darlin' you and I, we've had no regrets
'Cause our kids have had a good life with me and you, Disneyworld and backyard barbeques
Now it's you and me again, sunrise-sunset"

v2

First it's kindergarten-prom, then honeymoon
Then "how ya doin' mom?, my baby's due"
Little children bring into our lives such joy and cheer
"Hey let's take the kids to grandma's house today,"
The daughter's shocked to realize mom is gray
She takes her husband's hand and sheds a single tear

Chorus

She said, "I don't remember growing older, when did they?
The seasons of our lives have slipped away, but darlin' you and I, we'll have no regrets
'Cause our kids will have a good life with me and you, Disneyworld and backyard barbeques
Because it's our turn now, sunrise-sunset"

Bridge

The moments of our lives through joy and tears
Before we realize turn into years
The memories of time so quickly fade away
So spend them while you can with those you love
For this is Heaven's plan from up above
The treasures of your heart-they will carry you one day

Chorus

I don't remember growing older, when did they?
The seasons of our lives have slipped away, but darlin' you and I, we've had no regrets
'Cause our kids have had a good life with me and you, Disneyworld and backyard barbeques
Now it's you and me again, sunrise-sunset

D.O.C. 1997